

VALUABLE FAMILY MEDICINES.

received direct from the Patrons, and
FOR SALE BY
JAMES KENNEDY, JUN.
DRUGGIST;
the following Valuable Medicines:
Rawson's Anti-Bilious and Stomach Bitters.
PREPARED BY
HOMAS H. RAWSON,
Member of the Connecticut Medical Society.

THESE Bitters have undoubtedly had the most rapid sale of any Patent Medicine before discovered, and are justly appreciated for their singular and uncommon virtues for relieving weak and decayed constitutions, and all train of complicated complaints in common in spring and fall seasons, such as intermittent fevers and agues, long Autumnal Fevers, Dy-senteries, &c. They are also a very pleasant bitter for common use, and where they are known have taken the place and superseded the use of all other bitters in public houses as well as in private families. — Price 50 cents a box.

Dr. Lee's (Windham) Billious Pills.
THE great sale and increasing demand for these valuable pills for these twelve years past, has made their intrinsic worth. They have proved singularly efficacious in Bilious and Yellow fevers, Jaundice, Head Aches, Dysenteries, Billious colic, Colic, &c. Female complaints, &c.

The very great demand and high esteem in which these pills are held throughout the United States and the West Indies, has induced many to counterfeit them; the purchaser is requested to serve that the name of Samuel Lee, jun. (the inventor) is affixed to each of the directions, in own hand writing, or they will not be genuine. Price 50 cents a box.

Dr. Rawson's Itch Ointment.
A certain and safe application for that disagreeable complaint called the ITCH. Price 40 cents a box.

Dr. Rawson's Anti-Bilious Pills, or, Family Physic.

The extraordinary celebrity these pills have attained, the universal demand for them and esteem in which they are held by medical men of the first eminence, are sufficient testimonials of their intrinsic worth. In great colic and sudden attacks of disorders, an early use of these pills often produces the happiest effects, and taken once in eight or ten days in cases of indigestion, headache, diarrhea, pains in the stomach and bowels, dysen-teries, diarrhoeas, dropsies, &c. and a liberal use of my anti-bilious bitters in the intermediate time has relieved patients almost to a miracle. — Price 25 cents a box.

Thompson's Aromatic Tooth Paste.
For the purity in the teeth and gums, and for whitening and preserving the teeth. It likewise takes off all disagreeable smells from the breath, which generally arises from scorbutic gums and bad teeth. This paste is much in use, and highly esteemed by all those who value the preservation of their teeth, it may be applied at all times with the greatest safety. It is neatly put up in pewter boxes with paper directions. Price 50 cents a box.

Dr. Rawson's Worm Powders.
A medicine which for efficacy and safety in its operation stands unrivalled. The most authenticated proofs and respectable authorities of its wholesome virtues, and surprising effects, in extreme and alarming cases of worms, may be seen at the place of sale. Price 50 cents a packet.

Dr. Cooley's Vegetable Elixir; Or Cough Drops,

For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Spitting of blood, and all diseases of the Lungs. Its merits stand unrivaled. Price 50 cents a bottle.

Price 50 cents a box.

Hinkley's Infallible remedy for the Piles.

Price 50 Cents a Box.
Very particular directions accompanying of these valuable medicines.

He has likewise for Sale,

A general assortment of Drugs, Patent Medicines, Shop furniture and Vials; a few handsome Hall Lamps; Indian Shades; proof-vials of Essence of Spruce; Patent Blacking; Maceoil and Sherry wine; black bottles in hogheads of Paints ground in oil; and a few barrels of Flaxseed Oil, which he will sell on reasonable terms for cash, or to punctual customers on a short credit.

A generous allowance will be made to those who purchase the above Medicines by the dozen.

DISSERTATIONS ON THE DECEPTIVE ARTS OF DEMAGOGUES.

The demagogues of our country, among a hundred glaring instances of their artful and crooked policy, have successfully attempted to dupe the public by professions of veneration for the character and administration of Washington. They have the unmeasurable assurance to entwine his honors around their own brows and to attempt building their characters upon the column of his immortal fame. They insidiously pretend to be pupils of his school, to cherish with tenderness and affection his memory, and to follow his maxims: Yet they had platted a crown of thorns for his head, and had planted the stings of scorpions on his pillow. It was an early period of the administration of Washington when the same men who have at length opened to themselves the road to power, were found leagued in a general conspiracy against his measures and using their utmost efforts to weaken and disjoin his authority. Their first attempts were conducted with caution, but when increased in numbers and strength and borne forward by the tide of success, they became open and insolent. They first dropped hints and artfully excited suspicions; they feigned a jealousy of executive power and patronage, a trembling of heart at the extreme danger, which from hence threatened the liberties of the people: they pretended to have no wish to derogate from the character of Washington, no disposition to deny the merit of his services or to question his integrity; but considered him fallible and corruptible, like every other mortal: liable to be led astray by evil advisers and to be corrupted by power. It was, they pretended, hazarding the safety of the commonwealth to repose such boundless confidence in one man, and to invest him with such ample powers and extensive patronage; that the vast extent of his popularity and the weight of his character rendered him but the more dangerous, and that his having long acted as a military commander must have inspired him with despotic sentiments. These artful inu-endoes and surmises, after having floated some considerable time in the public mind, at length changed their shape and assumed the serious character of positive and direct accusations: and the onset once made, their hostility against this excellent man never ceased till he dropped the reins of government, nor even till he dropped into the grave; and perhaps concerning some of them, it would not be too harsh to say, that "their affliction at his death was drowned in their joy." His actions they artfully discolored by misrepresentations, the foulest imputations they fixed on his motives, and no means did they neglect, no arts did they leave untried, to stain his honors and blacken his fame. They advanced, they retreated, they shifted their ground and mode of attack, but never lost sight of their main object: every opportunity for calumny that fortune threw into their hands, they eagerly seized, and actions the most disinterested and patriotic they glossed into crimes. The danger that threatened the public from executive power and ambition, was the fruitful theme of their declamations.

Those crafty watchmen pretending a zeal for the people's rights which they never felt, busied themselves in throwing up intrenchments to prevent the encroachments of the president and every possible circumstance, was seized as a ground for charging him with the assumption of unconstitutional authority. His proclamation for a national thanksgiving, was loudly exclaimed against as an alarming stretch of power, an infringement of the rights of the people, a daring violation of the constitution. That executive act, dictated by piety drew forth an extraordinary fervor of zeal and bitterness of invective, and efforts were made to alarm the public mind as if the main pillars of the government had been shaken. What then! does Washington presume to proclaim a national thanksgiving? There is no such article in the book; the constitution gives him no authority of this nature; and if suffered thus to disregard and overleap the sacred character of our liberties, his will may soon become the law of the land. Such was the language of the day, and such a holy jealousy of the encroachments of executive power, was manifested while Washington held the reins of government! His proclamation of neutrality, an act of consummate wisdom, that saved the nation from a fruitless and calamitous war; was stigmatised with every epithet of reproach: the mob-leading zealots, let loose their rage against the author of that measure, on whom their invectives were thenceforward lavished with increasing acrimony and with such constant perseverance as plainly indicated a deep-rooted enmity. I will not indulge in mere assertions; I appeal to authentic documents and to undisputed facts.

The first newspaper that originated in the plan and apparently for the express purpose of opposing the administration of Washington and reviling his character, was the National Gazette, established at Philadelphia at that time the seat of the general government, and edited by Phillip Freneau, who meanwhile was employed by Mr. Jefferson, then secretary of state, as an interpreter of the French and Spanish languages. That paper having had a general and almost exclusive circulation in the western parts of Pennsylvania, was, with good reason thought to have caused the whiskey insurrection. When the National Gazette was dropped, the same system was taken up and continued with increased violence and bitterness, in the Aurora, which was at first conducted by Benjamin F. Bache. It will in some manner appear, how deeply Washington felt the stings of the detestable calumnies that had been thrown upon him from this paper, from the subjoined copy of a letter which he wrote to col. Humphreys, dated June 12, 1796.

"From the office of State you will receive every thing that relates to the public concerns; and the Gazettes, which I presume will accompany the dispatches, will give you a pretty good idea of the state of politics and parties in the country; and will show you, at the same time, (if Bache's Aurora is among them,) in what manner I am attacked for persevering steadily in measures which to me appear necessary to preserve us (during the conflicts of the belligerent powers) in a state of tranquillity.

But these attacks, unjust and as unpleasant as they are, will occasion no change in my conduct; nor will they produce any other affect in my mind than to increase the solicitude which has long since taken fast hold of my breast, to enjoy in the shades of retirement, the consolation of believing that I have rendered my country every service to which my abilities were competent; not from pecuniary or ambitious motives, nor from a desire to provide for any one further than their intrinsic merit entitled them to; and surely not with a view to bring any of my relations into office. Malignt, therefore, may dart its shafts; but no earthly power can deprive me of the consolation of knowing, that I have not, in the whole course of my administration, however numerous they may have been, committed an intentional error."

It was not long after the date of this letter when Mr. Bache the editor of the Aurora, died, and the direction of that paper fell into the hands of William Duane, who (as well as Callender) had before that time been employed as a writer for it, and was probably the author of much of the abominable slander and abuse of which it was the vehicle. Duane, soon after his arrival into this country, had highly recommended himself to the leading jugglers who were embarrassing the government, by a publication under the signature of Jasper Dwight in which he attacked the administration and person of Washington with a fiend like malignity. No fitter tool for the infamous work assigned him, could have been found. Possessing a considerable share of talents, together with a superlative measure of conceit and impudence and a rancor of heart that perpetually whetted & stimulated his industry, he had superior claims to patronage. In about nine months after President Washington had written to col. Humphreys, the letter I have copied into this essay, he retired from office; and the next day after his abdication, namely, the 6th of March, 1797, the following paragraph was published in the Aurora.

"LORD, now testest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation," was the pious ejaculation of a man who beheld a flood of happiness rushing in upon mankind—if ever there was a time that would licence the reiteration of the exclamation, that time is now arrived; for the man who is the source of all the misfortunes of our country is this day reduced to level with his fellow citizens, and is no longer possessed of power to multiply evils upon the United States. If ever there was a period for rejoicing, this is the moment; every heart in unison with the freedom and happiness of the people, ought to beat high with exultation, that the name of Washington from this day ceases to give a currency to political iniquity and to legalize corruption; a new era is now opening upon us, a new era which promises much to the people; for public measures must stand upon their own merits, and nefarious projects can no longer be supported by a name. When a retrospective is taken of the Washingtonian administration for eight years, it is a subject of the greatest astonishment, that a single individual should have cancelled the principles of republicanism in an enlightened people just emerged from the gulph of despotism, and should have carried his designs against the public liberty so far as to have put in jeopardy its very existence; such how, ever are the facts, and with these staring us in the face, this day ought to be a Jubilee in the United States.

Let the reader, to which ever political party he belongs, who really respects the memory of Washington, impartially view these documents; let him consider too that Duane has been and now is a favorite at the seat of government, a table companion of our president, who has placed him in business, the clear exponents, whereof are some thousands of dollars a year; finally let him consider that under the present administration almost every distinguished and efficient friend of Washington has had the mark of reprobation fixed on him, and that almost every notorious enemy and defamer of Washington, has been noticed, exalted, and manifestly regarded with complacency; and after having weighed all these circumstances, let him form his own conclusions.

Those men claim to have been in close and cordial amity with Washington, and the people are gulled by such gross hypocrisy! It is too intolerable.

NOBODY.

Aye, Nobody, and why not? As for my single self I see no just cause or impediment why my name and a newspaper should not be joined together, in the tenacious bands of scribbling wedlock as any other body. There's your Busybody and your Anybody, and your Somebody and your Everybody; each, each in his turn runs the race of tipographical notoriety — whilst I who boast a pedigree as great nay, (being eldest of the Body family) of greater antiquity than either, am doomed to group through the labyrinth of mere verbal consequence. Against such an unequal distribution of rights among the brethren of the same principle, of the same texture, I solemnly protest; & more especia-ly against the unhalloved profanation of my good name and character. Yea, in my own proper capacity I am resolved to defend both; and contrary to a certain dogma of philosophers, prove that I, No body possess the fundamental principles of a real body or matter; inasmuch as I occupy space, to wit, length and breadth; tho' as for depth I do not contend.

All my enemies—that is, all the world, utter daily calumnies on my fame; Ought I not then to avenge it?

Says Goody Gaffer, "John! you will be the ruin of your family; carousing it every night; who was with you last night?"

"With me mother—nobody!"

Little master lets fall aglance, it breaks, in comes the nurse—"Sirrah! who did this?"

"No body!"

Miss has a lover; he stays late; next morning a female friend gets a hint of it, (for the balmy breeze whispers these things to the sex.) She calls on her, and after some chit-chat, dryly observes, "Why really Melinda, you seem indisposed to-day — I fear you rested ill last night; Oh! while I think of it, prithee what rude creature kept you up so unseasonably? "Rude! me! up! (stammering and crimsoning) why; why; Nobody. (Zounds! when I'd swear by the ghost of a shadow that I never saw the huzzey.)

Obidiah Primrose is a beau; he struts about big with himself; wears a frizzled crop; bolster cravat; three inch vest; sack pantaloon; Suwarrow boots with tassels carries a six inch rattan, and visits the ladies. The other day in a large circle whilst officiously pressing a lady to take some lemonade which she had repeatedly declined, he turned a part of it upon her gown. A friend who sat near, but did not at the moment see the transaction, shortly after observing her gown soiled, enquired, who did it; Maria, twisting up the tip of her nose and glancing at Obidiah, replied with burlesque solemnity, "Alas! Nobody!" (What an insult to my name!)

A young woman makes a false step; it leaks out—all the world whispers "Whose is't? whose is't?"—and the same world mulously answers "Nobody knows!" (Scoundrels! when I know nothing at all about it.)

these are only small thefts: melarcies on my reputation.—In a number I may expose some of the heinous nature. Mean time, M-juries to me, should my cousin, Any-

[ibid.]

With sincere regret we learn that the honorable Roger Griswold, and the honorable Calvin Goddard, two of the representatives in congress from this state, have resigned. The real friends to the constitution of the United States, and the principles upon which it was administered for the first twelve years, we have no doubt will lament with us, the event which we have just mentioned. The people of the state with pride have witnessed their exertions in endeavoring to preserve the constitution and government from destruction. Mr. Griswold has been in congress ten years, and during the whole of that period it we are correctly informed, he has been absent from his seat but one day when the house of representatives was in session. To his distinguished talents, his perfect acquaintance with legislative duty, his extensive political science, and his commanding eloquence, even his political enemies bear unequivocal testimony; and we doubt not that the intelligence of his resignation, will be the most pleasing news that has reached their ears for many a year. We think it of Despotism: They talked loudly of reform, when their wish was to produce anarchy, the better to lay hold on power. Such is now seen to have been the fact. If the well meaning but beguiled and mistaken part of the American community; who have so long and so attentively listened to the professions of home-bred demagogues, who, like their prototypes the French demagogues perpetually bawling about "liberty, equality, and the sacred rights of the dear people," merely to conceal the projects of their own aggrandizements, from those whom they make their dupes: If, we repeat, our honest but deceived countrymen would permit themselves to be taught by experience, what an admirable lesson for their instruction would the history of late events in France prove. In that history they would see, that in the course of a few short years, an aspiring warrior, who once uttered no other creed than that of "liberty and equality," who made the air resound with his oaths and protestations of "eternal hatred to kings and royalty," who swore to "overthrow palaces and protect cottages" has, by cajoling with the popular credulity, elevated himself and family to the throne of despotic empire; and to hold the sceptre of a distant kingdom: To command the last shilling from the pockets of his subjects, to gratify either ambition or avarice and all that the cheated French people have obtained, as the boon for all their toils and deprivations, for the oceans of blood which they have so freely spilled; and the millions they have expended, is the exchange of the mild rule (for such was that of Louis XVI.) for the iron reign of a military despot. From this lesson they would learn the inevitable consequence of demagogism. If any honest democrat doubts the fact, and does not wish to be led blindfolded, wherever his leaders choose to conduct him; let him peruse the Federal American newspapers, for the last ten years; and he will find that the federalists, who have always proved themselves to be the tried friends of our republican constitutions, have never ceased warning their fellow countrymen of those inevitable consequences of the arts practiced by demagogues to delude and then betray them: That they would lead directly to royalty and would end in the U. States, as they have ended in France—in Despotism—That the Syren songs of "Liberty, Equality, and a violent attachment to the rights of the people," which have been chanted; had no other view than the personal aggrandizement of the singers, at the expense of their followers. True it is, the American people have not, like Frenchmen, drank deep of the cup of infatuation: But they have tasted enough to be convinced of the deleterious quality of the ingredients; and being convinced, it is hoped they will withdraw their confidence from men, who pursue by the same means, the same end in America, which Bonaparte, &c. &c. have pursued and obtained in France.

[Boston Centinel.]

From the Paris Gazette of Feb. 27.

A QUESTION OF JURISPRUDENCE.

"A foreigner, can he pursue before the tribunals of France another foreigner, to oblige him to fulfil the stipulations of a contract made in France, and which ought to be executed in France?" The first section of the court of appeal, sitting at Paris, in its audience of the fourth of Ventose, determined the question negatively.

Mr. Montfalcon, citizen of the United States of America, brought a suit against Mr. Skipwith, commercial agent of the U. States, and a citizen of the said states. This suit had for its object the execution of agreements subscribed by each party, at Paris for operations, which could only take place at Paris. It was brought before the tribunal of commerce of Paris; Mr. Skipwith refused to acknowledge the jurisdiction of the tribunal, and demanded that it should be remanded before the tribunals of the United States; the tribunal quashed his plea, and Mr. Skipwith having appealed from the judgment, he was affirmed in his appeal by the court of appeals. As the tribunals of the United States take no cognizance of actions brought against an absent person, when the absentee is in a foreign country on a mission from his government, all the commercial agents of the U. States in France, by the above decision are secured from all suits brought by their fellow citizens as long as they resided in France.

TANNING.—The plant tormentil, or septfoil, which grows abundantly every where, and the great bistort, or snakeweed, are found by the Prussian chemist, Hermstadt, to be infinitely preferable to oak bark for tanning. One pound and a half of tormentil, or three pounds of bistort, will tan a pound of dry hide, which requires seven pounds of oak bark. He likewise recommends the use of the leaves of the oak tree in tanning leather.
